Two Tickets

a molly-coddle policy that will put into it.

The convention applauded Mr. Depew's reference to the victories of Republican diplomacy.

"The world has always understood us until now," he said. His reference to the president as the "professor" brought roars of laughter.

"When I turn to a pacifist," said he, resuming, "I turn to a leading exponent, my friend, Mr. Bryan, who is here in the hall."

The former secretary was in the press stand as a newspaper correspondent and sat smiling at the reference to himself and the laughter that followed.

Mr. Depew spoke thirty minutes. His parting shot was that if the convention gets in trouble over any questions before it the delegates should call on the elder statesmen and he was one of them.

"Uncle Joe" Speaks.

There were calls for other speakers and after Chairman Harding had restored order he introduced former Speaker Cannon as "grand old Uncle Joe."

Without the celebrated black cigar "Uncle Joe" bowed and smiled. The resolutions committee still was at work and the speakers devoted their efforts to killing time. "Chauncey," said Uncle Joe, turning to Mr. Depew, "I am coming to your one hundredth anniversary."

The crowd laughed.

"We were out for the personal standpoint largely four years ago," said Cannon, "but there is not going to be any further falling out because this convention will nominate a worthy ticket and it will be elected."

"This year we'll have no shibboleth from anybody," he said.

"The country's bigger than any man or set of men."

Senator Borah was next called for a speech and when he concluded a recess was taken until 4 o'clock.
